The Point Arena convention has told the tale. There is no campaign that ever opened with a brighter prospect of Republican success than the one that has now closed with the defeat of the majority of candidates on the ticket. The result can be attributed to no other cause than the domination of Aleck Duncan and the push which worked for him and for the preservation of the supervisorial combine. The men who were in to see Mr. Duncan win evidently sacrificed everything to insure the election of their man, and the ramification of their influence was seen in every precinct on the coast of Mendocino county. In the Democratic valleys on this side of the range the Republicans fought like war horses, and in almost every instance turned probable defeat into almost certain victory. But they were working against tremendous odds. The coast had been circled by a coterie of demagogues, and these individuals seemed to exert more influence than those who told the plain and simple truth regarding the issues of the campaign.

At the present writing there seems to be no doubt of the election of the majority of the Democratic county ticket. The Republicans will elect the county clerk, the auditor, the treasurer, and the tax collector.

The Democrats will win the sheriff, the assessor, the recorder, the superintendent of schools, the coroner and the district attorney. So as far as things have gone it seems to be an even break between the two parties. The estimates made before election did not apparently take into consideration the Populist party, which, although it seemed dead to the world, proved to be sufficiently alive to disturb the vote to a considerable extent.

The Democrats were to a man surprised at the vote secured by Sanford for assemblyman. While he was badly beaten in his home precincts he ran ahead on the coast where he is but slightly known.

Barham will also lose the county, as he has Sonoma. The Humboldt papers openly charged the other day that Tom Geary went up to that county last week as a lobbyist for the Southern Pacific, and there seems to be no doubt that the sack was used to excellent effect by the railroad company.

Tragedy Near Town.

Jess and Otto Miller of this city made a ghastly discovery at about 8 o'clock this morning. They were driving out on the Hot springs road, and stopped to water their teams at Dick Simmons old place, four and one-half miles from here. On glancing toward the barn they saw a human form dangling from a rafter. Upon investigation they discovered that the body was that of a laboring man apparently about sixty years of age.

The deceased had slept in the barn last night, and had evidently made two attempts at suicide. The first time he had tied a hale rope around a rafter and placed a noose on his neck. The jump broke the rope. The deceased then refastened the rope and grasping the rafter let himself down slowly and deliberately choked to death. There was nothing on his person with which to identify him, and no one who called at the undertaking parlors seemed to have met him in his lifetime.

The body was brought in by Sheriff Smith and Coroner Barker, and an inquest will be held this afternoon.

Subsequent developments revealed the fact that the name of the deceased was Andrew Hansen. He left the hospital yesterday and remained over night in the barn where the suicide occurred.

GIBSON-RICHARDSON.

An Elaborate Affair—One More Bachelor Gone.

The nuptials of Miss Mamie Richardson and Marcus L. Gibson, both of this city, were celebrated at the home of the bride's mother yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The wedding was a very recherche affair, and was witnessed by seventy-six friends and relatives of the contracting parties.

The four large parlors were beautifully decorated in green and white, and in the corner of the front parlor hung a massive umbrella of chrysanthemums and ferns, and six little girls dressed in white held ropes of chrysanthemums from the umbrella to the stairway, through which the bride passed on the arm of her brother George, who gave her away. They were met under the umbrella by the groom and Rev. Farmer, who performed a beautiful and impressive ceremony. The groom presented the bride with a lovely band ring and then congratulations were in order. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Dr. Wadsworth.

The bride was handsomely gowned in cream grosgrained brocaded silk, trimmed with ribbon, pearls and point lace, made by the bride's mother, and carried a point-lace handkerchief. Diamonds were the only ornaments worn. The groom was neatly attired in conventional style.

The ushers were: Misses Grace Marders, Katie Van Allen, Myrtle Lynch, Alma Southard, Susie Lynch and Lillie Wells, to each one of whom the groom gave a little gold stick pin.

At 11 o'clock a wedding breakfast was given in a temporary banquet hall which had been erected on the lawn. The tables were elaborately decorated in pink and green with embroidered linen trimmings, and the banquet, which was served by Mrs. Southard, was a magnificent array of edibles. The bride's cake was a large pyramid cake of four stories and ornamented with roses, leaves and silver balls, with a tiny wedding bell on top. All during the breakfast hour the orchestra played sweet strains of music, and one among the many pieces rendered was, Mamie, Come Kiss Your Honey Boy.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibson left on the noon train for a trip to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego, taking with them bushels of rice and orange blossoms.

The bride, one of Ukiah's fairest flowers, possesses a very attractive disposition and is a great favorite among her large circle of friends. She is very popular socially and will adorn the position as wife of Mr. Gibson.

The groom has always lived here, has an enviable standing in the community, and is well liked by everyone who knows him. He is a jolly, courteous business man, who has withstood the blandishing smiles of the fair sex for many summers, but the victory was for Mamie. She drew her neatly adjusted bow and Mark fell mortally wounded.

The presents received by the bridal couple were elegant—among them being a solid silver tea set—and show the esteem the young couple are held in. May the sun shine fair upon them and their lives be complete in the joy that love and goodness bring.

The most pleasing news that has been received in Ukiah for many a day was that which arrived here Wednesday regarding the sale of the controlling interest in the local railway. Messrs Foster and Markham have now the direction of affairs on the San Francisco and North Pacific, and we may soon look for important developments in railway circles.

A Fatal Accident.

Rice Southwood, the teamster, met with an accident the first part of the week from the effects of which he died early Friday morning. Just how the accident occurred could not be ascertained, but he was found by Austin Lord in an unconscious condition a short distance east of town on the Willits road Sunday. He evidently had fallen from his wagon, which had passed over his body. He was removed to his home and medical aid was summoned. It was found that the injured man had received a fracture-dislocation of the spinal column and his body and lower limbs were paralyzed. The deceased came here about four years ago from Anderson valley, and had followed the calling of a teamster. He leaves a wife, but has no other relations here so far as could be learned, says The Beacon.

An Informal Banquet.

Friday evening last the following gentlemen were invited to an informal banquet by F. M. Mason, the proprietor of the cosy little opera house on Clay street: C. B. Johnson, A. F. Redemeyer, J. C. Ruddock, Dr. Stout, William Elliott, J. Q. White, Alf Pennington, James Cunningham, S. M. D. Paxton, Judge Mannon, Fred Handy, O. E. William, L. Van Dusen, Bud Orane, B. S. Hirsch, William Isbell, S. S. Bayley. The tables were arranged on the stage and the decorations were in the highest style of the art. The menu was a very tempting one, and wines and viands disappeared rapidly to the accompaniment of song and story. Mr. Mason is an ideal host, and the supper was one of the most pleasant affairs ever given in Ukiah.

The board of supervisors will meet Monday to canvass the election returns. The official vote will be published in THE PRESS next week.

FIRE AT THE CAPITOL.

The Supreme Courtroom Wrecked By an Explosion and Fire.

WASHINGTON, November 6.—An explosion and fire at 5:13 this afternoon wrecked the supreme courtroom and the rooms immediately adjoining it on the main floor of the capitol. The damage is enormous. The entire central eastern portion of the great marble pile from the main floor to the subterranean basement is practically a mass of ruins. The force of the explosion was so heavy that the coping stones on the outer walls, just east of where the explosion occurred, were bulged out nearly two inches; windows in all that part of the building were blown out, and locked doors were forced from their hinges quite 150 feet from the scene.

Fire followed the explosion so quickly as to seem practically simultanous with it. The explosion shook the immense structure to its foundations and was heard several squares from the capitol. It occurred in a small room tightly inclosed by heavy stone walls in the subterranean basement immediately below the main entrance to the old capitol building. In this room was a 500-light gas meter which was fed by a 4-inch main. Very little gas is used in that part of the building, but at the time of the explosion the gas had not been turned off at the meter.

The library of the supreme court, located immediately below the supreme court room, was badly damaged by fire, smoke and water, practically destroying the great collection of law reference books. The library contained about 20,000 volumes and was used not only by the justices of the supreme court, but by members of congress and lawyers practicing before the supreme court.

Shipping Live Fowls.

I have seen lately, as I have seen and commented upon year after year, during the shipping for many years past, large numbers of crates of live poultry sent in by express, the crates weighing twice as much as necessary. Many times they consist simply of a box made out of lumber at least an inch thick, the top covered with slats or narrow pieces of board, the latter often twice as thick as necessary. These coops should be made just as light as possible to answer the purpose. The bottom should be tight, all the rest slatted, and the narrower the slats the better. Lath makes the best material. The coops should not be so large that two men cannot handle them readily and easily, as this insures more careful handling. It is better if a slatted partition is put through the middle, as this divides the fowls, putting fewer together and keeps them from all sliding into one end of the coop in a heap if the coop is tipped up on end. Many fowls are suffocated because of proper precautions not being taken. Food and water should be provided, and the coops should not be overcrowded. Great loss results from overlooking the latter precaution. The fowls should be graded also, the best grades being put together and chicks and fowls packed separately. Don't pay heavy express charges on boxes made of such thick, heavy lumber.—Rural New Yorker.

Good Living In Poultry.

There may not be any very large fortunes to be made in poultry raising, but there is a handsome living for any one who has the love for the pursuit, the ability to raise and care for stock and a small capital to start with. These three things must go hand in hand. Separately they cannot bring success.—E. O. Roessle in Country Gentleman.

Quality Makes the Price.

Make it a point to have your poultry of the best quality before shipping to market. One who is not accustomed to visiting the large markets knows nothing of the enormous amount of inferior poultry that is sold and which largely affects the prices, yet there is always a demand for that which is good and at a price above the regular quotations. The assorting of the carcasses before shipping also leads to better prices. Old roosters, which seldom sell at more than half price, should not be in the same boxes or barrels with better stock, and to ship poultry alive and have roosters in the coop with fat hens is simply to lower the price of the hens, as the buyer will estimate the value by the presence of the inferior stock. In fact, never send any poultry to market unless in first class condition, and under no circumstances ship the inferior with that which is better.—New York Produce Review.

INDIAN AND TIGER.

A Clever Trick by Which the Former Outwitted the Latter.

According to a good and true tiger story in Cornhill, an Indian who had learned some of the elementary principles of jugglery and contortion went out one evening to walk upon a ridgy plain. When he reached the top of one of the mounds, he saw a tiger ahead of him, 500 or 600 yards away. Before the man could hide behind a mound the tiger had seen him and began to bound toward him at its topmost speed.

Having no means of defense, there was nothing for the man to do but to race for the nearest tree, but though he tried it and put forth his utmost strength the tiger steadily gained upon him.

What was he to do? In sheer desperation he resolved upon an unusual scheme. Just as he disappeared for an instant from the tiger's sight in running over a ridge he halted, stretched out his legs at right angles, curled down his head so as to look between his legs to the rear and extended his arms upward in a fantastic manner, like the sails of a windmill.

In a few seconds the tiger hove in sight, and at that instant the face of the object assumed a hideous grimace. A prolonged yell arose, such as had perhaps never before pierced the ear of any tiger, and the sails of the windmill began to revolve backward and forward as if a sudden whirlwind had burst upon the scene.

The tiger recoiled. What, he evidently thought, is this? There stood a ferocious star shaped monster, gigantic against the sky. Its hideous head was situated in the very center of its body—nay, its viselike jaws, between which those fiendish roars were issuing, were actually placed above its two fiery eyes. Its limbs were furiously clamoring for action, and the man he had been chasing, where was he? Already devoured by this terrible beast? The tiger could not pause to reflect. He turned tail, and as he disappeared over a friendly ridge a last awful yell caused him to redouble his pace. He was conquered by the unknown.

THE POWER OF SHADOWS.

A Gloomy View of the Power of Certain Popular Superstitions.

As antique runners passed from hand to hand the sacred torch, so the generations transmit to the generations which succeed them all that they have of light and knowledge, leaving them as a heritage the care of continuing the divine work of enfranchisement and of helping to dissipate the shadows of ignorance.

Little by little these clouds are vanquished and disappear, and the touch of intelligence flames the more radiantly in the midst of the travailing masses.

But all of a sudden a veil covers the torch—something surges up which seems like the darkness of another age. One feels that in a corner of this civilization monstrous things have place. Here they burn a woman accused of sorcery; there in Suabia a tribunal condemns to four days of imprisonment a laborer who had disinterred the corpse of an infant. He wanted to make bracelets of its finger nails, which, according to a belief held in that country, constitute a sovereign remedy against colic.

And all the stories of vampires, of elfs, return to the mind with all the victims they have made and are making still.

It seems in reading such things that the "power of shadows" is still impenetrable to all that science has done and that, as I have said, the effort is vain.—Figaro.

On the Eating of Loons.

Man is a creature of prejudice. In Scotland he will not eat eels; in Connecticut he will not eat sturgeon, the royal fish of England, where the first one taken in the Thames goes to the queen's table; in New York he will not eat lampreys, miscalled "lamper eels," which are delicacies in Connecticut, and in England some old king—I never could keep a record of kings—died from a surfeit of lampreys. With these prejudices in mind, and I hate all prejudices except those which I entertain, I decided to eat the loon.

There may be differences among loons, as there are between pigeons and squabs. I prefer an adult pigeon to a squab, there is better chewing on it, but if a man wants real hard chewing, with a flavor of raw fish, let him tackle an adult loon. That bird could not be picked. It was skinned, and in its stomach there was a catfish recently swallowed, one partly digested and the bones of another. The triggers of the pectoral fins of the catfish were set, but the stomach of the loon did not seem to be troubled by that fact.—Fred Mather in Forest and Stream.

Many a husband imagines that his wife is happy, healthy and strong, when she is really enduring in silence almost unbearable tortures. She meets him at the door on his return from work or business with a smile and a kiss. To be sure, she looks a little white and pallid, but she is vivacious and cheerful in his presence, and he does not realize that anything is wrong. If he had but come home during the middle of the day, he would have found, instead of the cheerful wife, a weak, sickly, nervous invalid, with headache, pains in the back, "stitches" in the side, burning and dragging down sensations and utter despondency and melancholy.

In almost every case of this kind the woman is really suffering from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism. Frequently she does not realize her own condition. If she does, she shrinks from undergoing the "examinations" and "local treatments" insisted upon by the average physician. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the medicine needed by women who suffer in this way. It acts directly on the sensitive organs concerned and makes them strong, healthy and vigorous. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration, soothes pain and tones and builds up the shattered nerves. It transforms weak, sickly, nervous, despondent invalids into happy, healthy wives and competent mothers. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. It makes "examinations" unnecessary. Honest dealers do not suggest substitutes for a little added profit to be realized thereon.

"I had suffered untold misery for years with ovarian trouble, an exhausting drain, constipation, painful periods and other annoying troubles," writes Mrs. Annie James, of No. 27 Seventh Street, Memphis, Shelby Co., Tenn. "Thank God, my health has been fully restored and I can gladly say I am a well woman to-day. I used six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and was completely cured."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation and biliousness. They never gripe. All good dealers have them.

A Baldheaded Reply.

A naval officer, very well and favorably known in London, has for some unknown reason been advanced in his profession very slowly, though he has grown gray in the service and indeed lamentably bald. Recently one of his juniors was bold enough to question him as to his remarkable absence of hair.

"How comes it that you are so very bald?"

The officer replied promptly and with much vindictiveness:

"You, man, you would be bald, I think, if you had had men stepping over your head for years in the way I have."—London Judy.

Different Ideas as to Clothes.

If the native women of Sumatra have their knees properly covered, the rest does not matter. The natives of some islands off the coast of Guinea wear clothes only when they are going on a journey. Some Indians of Venezuela are ashamed to wear clothes before strangers, as it seems indecent to them to appear unpainted.

Millionaires' Street.

The latest census proves that in upper Fifth avenue there is a stretch of houses a mile and a half long that contains dozens of millionaires. It is for its length the highest socially, the most architecturally handsome and by far the most wealthy street in the world.—New York Telegram.

In Cochin-China when husband and wife find they can no longer agree they give a dinner, to which they invite their relations and the patriarch of the village. The latter during the meal takes the chopsticks of the pair and breaks them, and by his action they are legally divorced.

A Logical Conclusion.

In a recent Walla Walla divorce suit, in which the defendant failed to appear, the referee made the following report:

"The plaintiff appearing in person and by her attorney, and the defendant not appearing and no one appearing for him, therefore he did not appear."—Walla Walla Statesman.

A HIGH HONOR.

The Young Lady Who Will Christen the New Battleship Wisconsin.

Miss Madge E. Thompson, the patriotic young woman who has been selected to christen the new battleship Wisconsin, is the daughter of A. E. Thompson of Princeton, Wis., and is 20 years old. She is described as a beautiful girl of rare attainments and accomplishments and is very popular in the social circles in which she moves. Governor Scofield selected her because of her high type of young womanhood and because of the fact that he has known her well ever since her birth, besides which Mr. Thompson and the governor are the warmest personal friends. The Wisconsin is now nearing completion in the Union Iron works, San Francisco, and will be ready for launching in a few weeks. She will be a battleship of the first class and in some respects the superior of the Oregon, which was built by the same company. The new ship will be as fine a craft of her kind as floats, and the fact that her fabric has been put together by the builders of the Oregon and Monterey will be a guarantee of her worth.—Chicago Times-Herald.

MISS MADGE E. THOMPSON.

Cultivation of Beauty.

This is one of the arts that have prospered, only the women of today cultivate the beauty advocated by modern modes and not by those that followed the dictates of classic days. There is no doubt that health is the best cosmetic there is. It renders the complexion clear and bright, the skin soft and supple, the flesh sufficiently well developed to keep in abeyance the lines and wrinkles set by headache and indigestion. There are many priestesses of health culture in America, but there are fewer in England. The great Rachel believed that by studying beings that were beautiful it was possible in time to resemble them. As a child she was not blessed with any great personal charms, but becoming enamored of some of the classic statues, she details in her memoirs how any beauty she possessed she owed entirely to these antique figures. We may not be prepared to adopt the healthy waist of a Venus de Milo, but we can hardly be losers by acquiring some of the dignity of carriage of the ancients, which is certainly not a characteristic of our day.

A Famous Cakemaker.

Mrs. W. H. Wilson of Nashville has become famous through her excellent cakemaking. She has never attended a cooking school, but her renown has gone abroad, and she recently filled orders in one week for cakes to be sent to London, Paris and Australia. She had for a long time been filling orders for brides' cakes and birthday cakes to be sent to various cities of the United States, and through the correspondence of her American friends she received orders from noted people in Europe. By means of icing the cakes after an ingenious method of her own she makes most elaborate designs with orange blossoms and lovers' knots for brides' cakes, and wildflowers, geraniums, orchids, fruit designs, etc., blossom forth as this artistic woman proceeds.

English Women Gardeners.

Women have taken to gardening in very spirited fashion in England. The first place in the examination in horticulture of the Royal Horticultural society is again taken by a lady student of the Horticultural college at Swanley, Miss Olive M. Harrison. Altogether 16 women students from Swanley passed in the first class, one from the County Technical school, Stafford, and one from the Women's London Gardening association, London, and one woman student from Swanley in the second class. Two ladies passed in the first class, one in the second and one in the third who are unconnected with any institution.

She Runs the Hotel.

Paris is talking with much interest of the venture of the Vicomtesse de Janze, who has started to add to her income by opening her magnificent Hotel Janze to the public at 3 francs a head. The house is one of the loveliest in the Champs Elysees quarter. It dates back from the eighteenth century, and every room can be considered a page of history. Portraits of the beauties are one of the specialties of the staircase, which is very fine. The salle a manger and the three salons are exquisitely decorated and full of art treasures and relics of such celebrities as Marie Antoinette and Josephine.—Exchange.

Points In Working Battenberg Lace.

The patterns for Battenberg lace, which come stamped upon pink muslin, show the size of braid used, and it is always best to select a material of a texture of linen similar to the quality of braid used. Before any needlework is attempted on a piece every bit of the braid must be basted on the pattern. It is best to study the design very carefully, so as to avoid cutting the braid except where it is absolutely necessary. Keep in mind that in all work of this character the wrong side is toward you. —Louise Long Christie in Woman's Home Companion.

Famous Warhorses.

Horses in war suffer more fatalities than men. Out of the many thousands who perish in their duty toward their masters only few return home to spend their lives in the ease and honor they deserve. One warhorse, however, which made a splendid record for himself and now has his virtues, name and noble deeds engraved on a fitting tombstone was Copenhagen, the horse the great Duke of Wellington rode at the battle of Waterloo.

Nine years after the Emperor Napoleon died at St. Helena an old white horse perished of old age and pneumonia in England. The skeleton of the animal is set up in the Royal Service institution, and to all visitors it is pointed out as Marengo, the charger Napoleon rode at the battle of Waterloo. Marengo came originally from Egypt and was left to wander on the dismal battlefield when the emperor was forced to fly for his life. An English officer found and took him, and he was sold to a general in the British army. In English pastures, cared for by kindly grooms, this noble horse passed the latter years of his life far more peacefully and happily than his great and unfortunate master. —London Mail.

A Weighty Question.

The story is told of a gilded youth of Chicago whose father employed a private tutor to ram algebra into the young man's head.

In order to simplify the "plus" and "minus" the tutor used the familiar illustration of the counting of years from the birth of Christ.

"Now, for instance, we speak of so many years A. D. or in the year of our Lord," he said. "Those years counting from the birth of Christ we may consider as the plus units. The years counting back one by one before the birth of Christ we may take to be the minus units. Now, suppose I ask you the question, How many years elapse between the date 10 B. C. and 10 A. D.?"

"Let me get that straight," said the young man.

The question was repeated. He sat in deep thought for several moments and then said: "Well, now, I'll tell you. I could answer that if I only knew in what year Christ was born."—Chicago Record.

Subdued the Virago.

While Spurgeon was still a boy preacher he was warned about a certain virago and told that she intended to give him a tongue lashing. "All right," he replied, "but that's a game at which two can play." Not long after, as he passed her gate one morning, she assailed him with a flood of billingsgate.

He smiled and said: "Yes, thank you, I am quite well. I hope you are the same."

Then came another burst of vituperation, pitched in a still higher key, to which he replied, still smiling: "Yes, it does look rather as if it is going to rain. I think I had better be getting on!"

"Bless the man!" she exclaimed, "he's as deaf as a post. What's the use of storming at him?" and so her ravings ceased and were never again attempted.

FIVE AGES OF WOMEN.

Only a prattling wee baby
Dancing on mamma's knee,
A chubby and dimpled cherub
Pretty as she could be.
Laughing and jumping and crowing,
Bubbling with innocent mirth,
Mamma just thinks her a treasure,
The darlingest one on earth.

Only a laughing school girl,
Fair as a budding rose,
Gazing with tender glances
On her young would-be beaux.
Never a cloud above her,
Never a care has she.
No one could help but love her
In her simplicity.

Only a fair young lady,
Proud as a queen of old,
Lovers who seek her favor
Deem her haughty and cold.
Naught but a prince can woo her,
A prince with an honored name;
Love is to her but folly
The dream of her life is fame.

Only a serious woman,
Charms slowly fading away,
Her prince never came to see her,
Her head is threatened with gray,
Longing for love that's denied her,
Praying for some one to woo;
Gone are her queenly ambitions—
Any old fellow will do.

Only a maiden of fifty
Skillfully spreading her net.
Still there is hope in her bosom
That some one may gobble her yet.
Paint and cosmetics and powders,
And clad in the briefest of dress,
When seen on her wheel at a distance
You'd think her but twenty, or less.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours: a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. At druggists fifty cents or one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, if you send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure and mention that you read this generous offer in the REPUBLICAN-PRESS.

A company has been organized at Pasadena with a capital stock of $50,000, to supply the city with water.

The river steamer J. D. Peters, plying between San Francisco and Stockton, and the collier Czarina collided in San Francisco bay on a recent dark night. The Peters was badly damaged and had to be beached, and the Czarina had an immense hole stove in her side. No lives were lost.

Mrs. Jane Malarky is in jail at San Francisco charged with murder. Recently she was creating a disturbance in the rooms where she lodged, and Mrs. Nettie Suits, her landlady, went to quiet her. Mrs. Malarky, who was drunk, threw a lamp at Mrs. Suits, which struck her and exploded, setting fire to her clothing. She died from the injuries received.

August C. Widbur, under arrest for embezzling public money while treasurer of San Francisco, has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment.

FUN IN THE FOOTNOTE.

A Popular Librettist Couldn't Withhold a Joke on Prospective Bride.

W. S. Gilbert does not retain all of his humor for use in his librettos.

In the early days of his success, when Gilbert and Sullivan were considered by managers as the "sure winners" in the comic opera field, a young woman who was a member of one of the "Pinafore" companies wrote to Gilbert telling him of her approaching marriage with a young man of good position and family.

Gilbert congratulated the young woman and expressed the hope that her future might be prosperous and happy.

Only a little more than a month passed, and another letter from the same girl reached him, in which she stated that her engagement with the young man had been broken and that she had accepted another suitor.

He replied that he had every confidence in her judgment and again expressed his hearty wishes for her welfare.

It was almost two months after that that Gilbert received a third letter from the same girl, who informed him that young Lord —— had proposed and that she had accepted him after breaking her engagement with No. 2.

Gilbert's humor could no longer withstand the temptation, and he wrote, "I desire to congratulate you on your approaching marriage with"— Here he placed an asterisk and in a footnote added:

"Here insert the name of the happy man."

This is probably as characteristic a piece of humor as any that appears in his "Bab Ballads" or in his works for the stage.—New York Press.

TWO HUMOROUS BROTHERS.

They Won Wagers on the Strength of Their Own Homeliness.

Many years ago there were two brothers, named Joel and Jonathan, who were famous throughout Wayne county, Ind., because they were both such frights. One day they were on their way to Cincinnati by wagon in the days of the old canal. The wagon was of the covered variety, and only Joel was visible to the natural eye as the vehicle plunged into and out of the chuck holes that infested the way. Joel was said to be the next to the ugliest man in all the country round, and his brother took precedence.

The two brothers met a stranger, who, attracted by the supremely homely face of Joel, stopped his horse and said:

"Excuse me, my friend, but would you mind tellin me your name?"

In a sepulchral tone that fitted well the hideous face Joel replied:

"Well, I guess I hain't never done nothin that would make me ashamed to tell my name. My name is Joel"—

"Where do you live, if it is a fair question?"

"I live in Wayne county, Indianny."

"Well, stranger, I've seen much of Indianny, but I'll bet you $10 that you're the ugliest man in the state."

"Well, I hain't no gamblin man," replied Joel, "but I hain't never seen nothin in the Scriptur' ag'in bettin on a sure thing, an I'll jest take that bet."

Turning to the wagon cover and peering into its depths he called:

"Jonathan, stick your head out hyer."

Jonathan did as he was requested.

The stranger paid the money without a word of complaint.—New York Mail and Express.

He Got His Leave.

The Rev. Robert Nourse relates this story in The Congregationalist:

On a certain Sunday morning the orderly of the colonel of the Eighth Ohio presented himself before that officer. "Everything all right, colonel?" he asked. After looking around and finding that the tent had been put in order and his boots blacked he replied in the affirmative. "I have a favor to ask," said the orderly. "State it," said the colonel. "I beg that I may go off today, colonel, and go a little earlier and remain a little later." "For what reasons?" demanded the colonel. The orderly produced a letter and said, "Sir, I have received this from the president, and he invites me to dine at the White House."

The president of the United States is in every way to be ranked among the great rulers of the world. But the genuine and unaffected democracy of the man who now holds that exalted office is shown in this incident, which could not be paralleled in any other country in the world.

Santiago's Distinction.

Santiago de Cuba has an ecclesiastical distinction, and that is that it is the oldest bishopric in the western world. When all Pennsylvania was a traceless waste, an archbishop ruled a see of no mean proportions from that city and under that title. From the city of Santiago also went out the two great missionaries to the Indians and negroes, the first, Las Casas, who evangelized nearly all Central America, and the second, St. Peter Claver, who worked among the negroes of Brazil.—Philadelphia Call.
